Dear Human Resources Director:

My name is Sanjina Akther and I am applying for the open position of graphic designer in your advertising department. Please accept this cover letter and resume as my formal application.

Although I am at the beginning of my journey into the wonderful world of graphic design. I believe my skills to be malleable and fresh. I have had wonderful opportunity to develop projects and designs for several businesses in my home country of Bangladesh. I am determined to create deliverables that are distinct and unmatched.

My interest in art and design was evident at an early age, and I have always strived to pursue a career in graphic design. My most recent studies at Seneca College have given me the opportunity to expand upon and improve many necessary skills related to becoming a successful graphic designer, through the effective use of Adobe Photoshop, Illustrator, and InDesign. I was able to learn how to use these applications through real-world trials.

In the job description, it states you are searching for candidates capable of quick learning, assisting the senior designer, and as well participating creative brainstorming sessions. As a former art teacher, I understand the value conveying an idea in simple and effective terms. My previous projects have all experienced success and I have received excellent feedback from my clients. I would love to be able to use my creativity for visualizations and ability to learn (and to teach) in lending a hand to facilitate your upcoming goals and objectives.

I am available to start immediately and would greatly enjoy the opportunity to meet with you to further discuss how I could contribute to the culture of a company that has already accomplished so much.

In the meantime, I invite you to view my full portfolio to learn more about my capabilities: www.sanji.ca

Sincerely,
Sanjina Akther
